

Home Learning

Over the coming days many of your families will be staying at home. There is a wealth of information already available to support home learning and we will be developing more over the coming days, but in the meantime, you may wish to share some of the following with your families....

Talk and play every day

Talk and play every day summarises how parents and carers can create a positive home learning environment, whilst remaining simple and easy to communicate through a range of channels. Our strengths-based approach condenses the evidence about the quality and quantity of parent/adult-child interactions for language development to 3 concepts:

- talk: encourage talking and 2-way interactions
- play: language thrives when children interact and explore in a playful and creative manner
- every day: learning happens all the time and in everyday life experiences.

While many factors influence children's learning, the home learning environment counts the most!
